Imagine each commitment as a puzzle piece. A laboratory session on Tuesday evenings, a part-time shift at the campus bookstore on the same night, and a recurring gaming club meet-up form three pieces that must fit together. If even one piece protrudes, the whole picture collapses. The guide encourages students to lay out all pieces on a digital calendar before the semester begins, observing where edges overlap and where they can snap together. Audit Early. Export the class schedule from the ISU student portal, then import work shifts and club meetings into a single Google Calendar. Color-code each category for instant visual contrast. Prioritize with Purpose. Rank commitments on a scale of Academic Core, Professional Development, and Leisure. Core items—lab sections, major-required lectures—receive the highest protection against displacement. Negotiate Flexibly. Contact employers or club officers to request a shift swap or alternative meeting time. Most campus employers understand the academic calendar and will accommodate a reasonable request. California
